POLICE DRIVEN FROM TOWN BY RAH RAH BOYS

University Boys' Attempt to Play
Ball in Main Street, Leads To General War.

Valparaiso, Ind., April 12.—

The Chinese revolution and the Mexican rebellion are mild forms of amusement compared with what this town went through last night.

And it all started with a harmless little game of baseball started by a few students of Valparaiso university.

It was a good game, and quite interesting to watch, and probably there would have been on argument about it had not the students selected the main street of the city for a diamond.

This peeved a stalwart guardian of the law, and he tried to use moral suasion on the captain of the ball team. Moral suasion proving of no effect, the policeman and the captain went to the mat, or, to be more exact, the paving.

The policeman was victor in this part of the argument, and placed the student under arrest. The ball game broke up, and there was peace, until the news of the horrible outrage perpetrated on a student of the university was carried to the campus.

Then what Sherman said war was, broke loose. Three thousand students stormed down; drove the police and fire departments outside the town limits; smashed windows, fired revolvers; bumped innocent citizens on the bean, and generally behaved like a healthy bunch of London suffragettes.

They broke into the Memorial theater, which was crowded, and they instilled the fear of the students of Valparaiso into the audience, which left.

Then they smashed the theater furniture, and had a dickens of a good time all over the town until they got tired and went home to their beds.

When this happened, the police and fire departments returned to town.

POLICE CHIEF TAKES ON VICIOUS AIR AT STRIKE

Threatens the Heads of the "Industrial Anarchists" Who Started the Strike.

Aberdeen, Wash., April 12.—

"I'll break this strike, or I'll break the heads of the industrial anarchists who started it—one or the other."

This is not the statement of a Russian grand duke, dear reader. It was made by Chief of Police
